The Press says that the annual meeting of Cumberland County Lodge, I. O. G. T. was held at Duck Pond Wednesday. Notwithstanding the rain about seventy members attended the meeting. Two were found in front of the house, with their necks wrung, and the remainder having wandered off into the woods returned in a day or two afterwards.——Mr. Noah Pinkham had stolen from his pasture a very valuable sheep, which he valued at $20. Several other neighbors have also lost quite a quantity of fruit from their choicest apple trees.

THE SITUATION.

The sifting of the multifarious rumors, despatches, statements and claims leaves the Presidential election practically unchanged from what we stated in our last issue, viz: that with the votes of Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida Governor Hayes is certainly elected. The fact that the National contest has narrowed down to this point occasions the desperate effort to dispute the verdict of those States. Let us look at the facts that are undisputed.

First, putting the above cases aside for consideration, the Democrats have not made any gains of States in this election. They have not carried a single State which voted against them at its latest elections. They have not been making converts among the people during this campaign. They have not only failed to carry any Republican States, but they have met with sweeping popular reverses that have entirely wiped out their large majority in the only branch of the National Government in which they have had control and been on trial.

Second, the Democratic party has never been friendly to or gained the support of the loyal white men or the enfranchised colored men of the South. It has no valid reason to expect the indorsement of any State where these two classes largely predominate and are afforded reasonable protection in their exercise of the right of suffrage.

Third, the loyal whites and enfranchised colored men constitute an undoubted, unquestioned majority of the voters in each of the States of South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida. To have carried one of them this year the Democrats must have done what they failed to achieve in all the rest of the Union, viz: to obtain a majority in any State which has up to this time gone Republican.

Fourth, in spite of the outrages and intimidation that succeeded in the violent revolutionizing of other Southern States during the past few years, the Republican majority in South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida has maintained its supremacy at the polls. Florida is a small State, but in 1872 on a total vote of only 33,000 it gave Grant 2,337 majority and 1,509 Republican majority for Governor. At the next general election, in 1874 it gave 1,054 Republican majority. In 1872 Louisiana gave over 18,000 Republican majority, and in 1874, in spite of organized violence throughout the State, the Republicans carried the election for State Treasurer, although Gen. Sheridan has officially testified to the wholesale murders which kept Republicans from the polls. South Carolina gave 49,000 majority against Greeley in 1872 and 32,305 Republican majority for Governor the same year. Its absolute Republicanism was further conceded in 1874 by the failure of the Democrats to nominate any candidate and Governor Chamberlain was elected in a canvass which divided the Republican vote. No well informed man in America doubts that South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida have a majority of voters in favor of the Republican party.

The Democrats are determined to secure the vote of one of these States to elect their candidate. We believe the vote of neither can be given to Samuel J. Tilden except through fraud at the election or in the count. The whole country is now watching for the developments and the suspense can only be ended by a conclusive demonstration of the popular verdict in those States. President Grant voices the general feeling when he says: "The country cannot afford to have the result tainted with illegal or false returns!"

FALSEHOOD AND FRAUD.

It would seem that the systematic falsehood that characterized the recent Democratic canvass has culminated in the effort to declare Tilden elected without regard to facts or figures. In Ohio weeks ago orders were sent out to the Democratic editors of that State to claim everything in every issue until the election and to "claim exultingly and positively. The same tactics are pursued now. In our own vicinity the organic display of Tilden pyramids is continued with a number of staunch Republican States included, in spite of the plain demonstration of their status in adjoining despatches, and over two hundred votes are claimed for Tilden without the slightest regard for the facts as they appear in the current news, showing that he must still gain one of three States positively claimed by the best-informed Republicans in order to have a majority at all.

Our readers remember the Colorado election and the vigor and persistency with which the Democratic papers continued to falsify about it until after the October States had voted, when a leading Democratic organ said "Now let the truth from Colorado come along. We can stand it." There was never a doubt about that State after a fair portion of the returns had come in. Now we have the same preconcerted claims to States that have been Republican for years, but the Democrats simply shout that they have won, without caring what the returns may show. This is all done in pursuance of the Tilden programme of brag, and is intended to throw dust in the eyes of a portion of the public.

The wrecking of a canvasser's train in Florida, the smashing of ballot boxes in Louisiana, and the telegraphing of unfounded claims from South Carolina, are a part of the same tactics which perpetrated a gross fraud on the whole Associated Press on Thursday midnight. The despatch sent out announcing that the Republican Headquarters had been closed all day, and giving Democratic assertions the coloring of facts was an unmitigated falsehood and the New York Agent has hastened to contradict to-day the false statement sent out by some subordinate. The hand that perpetrated this fraud appears in the business and it is the hand of Hewitt, who telegraphed to Indiana recently instructions to "buy seven more mules." With the Associated Press despatch in question was given a private one, from North Carolina to Mr. Hewitt, who alone could have made it public, and what he was doing around the Press reporter's rooms at so late an hour would be interesting to know.

It is the game of falsehood, bluster and brag, and it is to be kept up to the last by this party of "political reform." Let the people wait for and weigh the facts as established.

"The time may yet come when the ballot in the hands of the Freedmen will preserve the jewel of Liberty to the diadem of the Republic."—ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

THE BATTLE WON.

[From the N. Y. Times Thursday.]

The sober sense of the people has triumphed after all. Twenty-one States have been carried by the Republicans, and their 185 electoral votes will make RUTHERFORD B. HAYES the next President of the United States. The victory is one of the greatest moment to the country, and will be the occasion of very sincere thankfulness among the majority of the intelligent and law-abiding portion of the American people.

Yesterday morning the single element of uncertainty remaining as to the result of the Presidential contest related to the issue of the election in Florida. There is no longer any doubt that Florida has been carried by the Republicans and the new element of uncertainty introduced by the absence of conclusive returns in regard to South Carolina has been finally removed. The Republicans have carried three Southern States—Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida—and all the Northern States save four. The result gives the Republican candidates 185 electoral votes, being the exact number necessary to a choice.

On Wednesday the following States were put down as surely Republican: Colorado, California, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oregon, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin, Louisiana, and South Carolina. Some of these States were claimed by the Democrats, but all intelligence, thus far received, not only shows that the above estimate was correct, but that Florida, which was left in doubt, has gone Republican by at least 1,500 majority—our latest despatches say 2,000—and that the two Republican Congressmen are also elected. Encouraging reports were received from Oregon early yesterday morning, and in the afternoon came the decisive news that the Democrats conceded the State, which had given a Republican majority of over one thousand, and gained a Republican Congressman. In Nebraska the same condition of affairs was shown. There the Republican majority rose to 8,000. Despatches from Nevada made it certain that the State had gone for Hayes. The latest news from South Carolina shows a Republican victory, the Democrats conceding the State to Hayes and the Republicans claiming 5,000 majority. Louisiana is one of the States which the Democrats have claimed; but our despatches, coming from various sources in the State, show that it has gone Republican. The latest intelligence points to the certain election of Gov. Rutherford B. Hayes to the Presidency, and a Republican victory in the Nation.

All the Congressional districts have not been heard from definitely, but the advices received destroy the Democratic majority in the present House. The indications now are that the Republicans have elected 145 members, (including those chosen in September and October,) and the Democrats 145. In the present Congress the Republicans have but 110 members, to 183 Democrats. There is, therefore, a Republican net gain of 73. All the Representatives have now been chosen except in New Hampshire, which is now represented by one Republican and two Democrats, and will elect in March, 1877.

THE ELECTION IN MAINE.

We have received returns of the recent election from 312 towns and cities in this State. In these places 57,564 votes were thrown for Hayes and Wheeler, and 43,492 for Tilden and Hendricks. Republican majority, 14,372. These figures would seem to indicate a Republican majority in the State in round numbers, of 18,000—a gain of 3,000 over the September election.

We would inform our Democratic exchanges that these returns have not been "doctored."—Kennebec Journal.

The Next House.

From the Congressional returns already received there can be but little doubt that the heavy Republican gains have wiped out the Democratic majority and given us control of the next House.

WELL SAID.

Would it not be a rare instance of poetic justice if the security of business at the North, the purity of the ballot-box, and the honor of the Nation should at last prove to have been preserved by the votes of those very colored citizens in Florida, to whom, not long ago, great and proud States at the North refused to extend the franchise?—N. Y. Tribune.

The Boston Herald and the Springfield Republican must be abundantly pleased with the evidence of their influence upon their own readers. They have elected Gen. Butler, secured Dr. Loring his coveted seat in the House of Representatives, defeated Chapin in the Berkshire District and run Charles Francis Adams thousands behind Tilden on the popular vote. But in the face of these accumulated disasters they have the proud satisfaction of knowing that they secured the election of Leopold Morse to Congress!!

Gov. Hayes and Gov. Tilden both issued proclamations on Wednesday designating the 30th inst. as Thanksgiving Day in their respective States.

The friends of Hon. Ezreff H. Banks, at present Treasurer of York County, will bring his name forward as a candidate for State Treasurer. He is the only competitor thus far announced of Hon. William Caldwell who filled the office so acceptably for many years and who is assured of a very general and hearty support.

When the Boston Post, in a column headed by a big rooster, pats Richard H. Dana on the back and gnashes its Democratic fangs at Mr. Blaine, we have a pretty good indication of where the Democracy have found comfort and whence have come the bugle notes that have rallied the loyal States in almost solid column against the revival of the Confederacy. Scan the roll of States and see how closely the ranks are formed on the old line of the Blue and the Gray.

THE "BEST" PRESIDENT. That was a patriotic and noble remark made by President Tilden when he thought the result was certain. "I guess we've got them this time sure." And this is the man who, according to the Boston Post, is to make the best President since George Washington. How this remark savors of civil service reform. "We've got them" says Tilden. And then no doubt he whispered to his friends.—Boston Journal.

VEGETINE

Purifies the Blood, Renovates and Invigorates the Whole System.

Its Medical Properties Are

ALTERATIVE, TONIC, SOLVENT AND DIURETIC.

VEGETINE is made exclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots and herbs, and so strongly concentrated that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula, Scrofulous Humor, Tumors, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic Diseases, Canker, Faintness at the Stomach, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. Sciatica, Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and Spinal Complaints can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For Ulcers and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, Pustules, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Scald Head and Ringworm VEGETINE has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration, and uterine diseases and General Debility, Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration and regulates the bowels.

For Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness and General Prostration of the Nervous System, no medicine has ever given such perfect satisfaction as the Vegetine. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by Vegetine have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, Vegetine is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable Blood Purifier yet placed before the public.

UNQUALIFIED APPRECIATION.

BOSTON, Nov. 18, 1875.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—During the past five years I have had ample opportunity to judge of the merit of VEGETINE. My wife has used it for complaints attending a lady of delicate health, with more beneficial results than anything else which she ever tried. I have given it to my children under almost every circumstance attending a large family, and always with marked benefit. I have taken it myself with such great benefit that I cannot find words to express my unqualified appreciation of its goodness.

While performing my duties as a Police Officer in this city, it has been my lot to fall in with a great deal of sickness. I unhesitatingly recommend Vegetine, and I never knew of a case where it did not prove all that was claimed for it. Particularly in cases of a debilitated or impoverished state of the blood its effects are really wonderful; and for all complaints arising from an impure state of the blood it appears to work like a charm, and I do not believe there are any circumstances under which Vegetine can be used with injurious results, and it will always afford me pleasure to give any further information as to what I know about Vegetine.

CHARLESTOWN, March 19, 1869.

H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir: This is to certify that I have used your "Blood Preparation" in my family for several years, and I think that for Scrofula or Cankerous Humors or Rheumatic Affections it cannot be excelled; and as a Blood Purifier and spring medicine it is the best thing I have ever used, and I have used almost everything. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine. Yours respectfully,

MRS. A. A. DINSMORE, 19 Russell St.

EVENING DESPATCHES

A Summons to Democratic Sachems to hasten to Louisiana—Hewitt wants "more Mules."

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Evening. The following despatch has been sent to Gov Ingersoll and Hubbard of Conn, Robinson of N Y, Bedle of N J., Curtin of Pa, Palmer of Ill, McCreery of Ky, Carroll and others Also to Senators Thurman Bayard Randolph McDonald, Kernan and other Senators and to leading public men in the northern States

The Republican and Democratic citizens of New Orleans urgently request that a delegation of prominent gentlemen come there at once to counsel peace and a fair and honest return You are earnestly requested to be one of ten or fifteen gentlemen, all widely known, to meet in Louisville at the Galt House Saturday eve, proceeding directly South, or if more convenient, meeting at the St Charles Hotel New Orleans, on Monday morning. Your prompt acceptance by telegraph is requested This emergency appeals to your patriotism.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, Chairman

The acceptances warrant a full representation at New Orleans.

Gen. Sherman's Provisions for Preserving Peace in Florida.

WASHINGTON, Nov 10. Gen Sherman has acted upon the telegram received from the President and has received word from Gen Ruger that he had ordered nine companies to Florida and would order five more and go in person with them, leaving Col Hunt of the 5th Artillery in command in South Carolina A company of artillery will be part of the troops sent from South Carolina

Prominent Republicans Going to See a Fair Count

WASHINGTON, Nov 10—Evening. In accordance with the request of Gov Kellogg of Louisiana that prominent men should go from the North to inspect the counting of the votes in that State, the President has invited the following gentlemen to proceed to New Orleans for such purpose Hon W D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, Gen J A Garfield, of Ohio, Hon J. A. Kasson, of Iowa, Hon John Schonberg, of Pennsylvania, and Gen J. A. Logan, of Illinois It is understood that most of these gentlemen have accepted and will reach New Orleans within a few days A number of other leading citizens have also been requested and will go.

From Ohio—Hayes' Majority Over 7,000.

COLUMBUS, O, Nov 10—11 P. M The Republican State Committee now have semi-official returns from 86 out of the 88 counties of Ohio, which show a net Republican gain of 623 over Barnes' majority last October, which was 6 636 If the two counties still out should cast exactly the same vote they did in October, Hayes majority will be 7,250 continues unabated and the streets have been filled all day with excited crowds who are much more irritable and less generous than heretofore. Several street fights have occurred.

The Excitement over Election News

The Democratic State Committee still assert their perfect confidence in Tilden's election. The Republican State Committee, a majority of whom have heretofore had doubts as to the result, are now perfectly confident of Hayes' election and have so notified their correspondents.

Governor Hayes.

I understand that Gov. Hayes himself no longer doubts his election and is confident that an honest canvass of the votes in States that have been set down as doubtful, will fully prove this fact to the perfect satisfaction of all fair-minded men.

A Georgia Report on Florida.

An Augusta, Ga., despatch from Lake City 11.30 P. M. says corrected returns from 28 counties and estimates for the other 10 would give the State to the Democrats by 1,500 majority.

A Falsehood Denied.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Evening. It is explicitly denied that Senator Conover, of Florida has telegraphed North conceding that State to the Democrats.

Louisiana Estimates

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Evening The Democratic National Committee report the receipts of returns official and semi-official which give Tilden 7,487 majority in Louisiana.

A New Orleans Despatch.

A New Orleans despatch dated midnight says that official and unofficial returns in 61 parishes show a Democratic gain of 650. The Democrats claim the State as absolutely certain for Tilden by not less than 6,000 majority.

Statement of Gov. Kellogg.

A New Orleans despatch midnight gives a statement of Gov. Kellogg to the press. He says very few official returns have been received and the Democrats only claim the State by estimating 4000 Democratic majority in five Republican parishes. No one can dispute that these were overrun before and on election day by armed white leaguers. The registration there is 8,709 colored and 3,698 white, and in 1872 they gave 3,000 Republican majority by the returns of the Fusion Board. In 1874 they gave the Republican candidate 3,900 majority as conceded by the Democratic State Committee. In Ouachita a U. S. Commissioner was killed on election day and the polls taken possession of by white Leaguers. In E. Feliciana not a single Rep. vote was allowed to be polled. The parish gave 900 Republican majority in 1872. He says the Democrats only base their claims to the State upon the grossest frauds. By counting the Ku-Kluxed parishes, where the Republicans were deprived of a legitimate majority of thousands the result may be close. On an honest canvass of the election in no contingency can the Democrats have carried the State. The colored people voted the Republican ticket with more unanimity than ever before. Complete official returns from remote parishes may not be had for five or six days.

Democratic Committee Figures

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Evening. The Herald's New Orleans despatch says the Louisiana Democratic Committee state that returns from all but 5 parishes give Tilden 6,491 majority. The 5 parishes not heard from gave 3,550 Democratic majority in 1874. Private despatches from New Orleans say the Democratic majority cannot fall below 5,000

NORTH CAROLINA

Heavy Claims but No Figures.

RALEIGH, Nov. 10 Additional returns continue to increase the Democratic majority in this State. It may reach 17,000 Painful anxiety in regard to the Presidential election is manifested in this city to-night

AFTERNOON DESPATCHES.

Mischief Brewing—Democratic Managers Going South.

NEW YORK, Nov 10 A Washington special to the Tribune says a despatch received from Louisville states that Senator-elect Beck, Senator Bayard, Heister Clymer and Congressman Hewitt, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, leave Louisville to-night on a special train for New Orleans The writer of the despatch thought the National Republican Committee should be informed of the fact.

D Magone, Jr, Chairman of the Democratic New York State Committee, passed through Washington on the early morning train enroute to Richmond, Va There is mischief brewing

A Falsehood Contradicted

The statement last night that the Republican Headquarters at the Fifth Avenue Hotel were closed was untrue. The public rooms were open nearly all night and Gen Sickles bulletined despatches as fast as received.

Tilden on Thursday Night—Samuel Talks of Fraud'

The Herald says Gov Tilden at supper was by no means sanguine as to the result, and although his friends loudly declare they will not suffer him to be counted out, the Governor evidently does not regard such a contingency as entirely impossible

Last evening the excitement at the Tilden mansion gave way to great quiet He had evidently made up his mind that no definite news could be expected during the night from Louisiana and Florida and therefore retired at an early hour

Governor Hayes

A Columbus, O, despatch says Gov Hayes is very cheerful He said last night "I don't give it up, although things do not look as bright as they might We may still pull through by that one important vote"

Florida Certainly Republican

11 45 A. M A Florida special to the Post from the Internal Revenue Collector at Jacksonville, dated 2 55 A M, says Florida certainly Republican.

The White League and the Ku-Klux Organizations Raiding on the Louisiana and Florida Ballot Boxes

NEW YORK, Nov 10. The National Republican Committee state that information from Louisiana and Florida shows that the White League and Ku-Klux are making raids on the ballot boxes and canvassers. This of course proves that they have lost these States.

Gov Kellogg and Gov. Stearns are informed that leading friends of Mr Tilden are on the way to Louisiana and Florida and they invite prominent men of national reputation of both parties to be present.—They ask that the situation and the facts be thoroughly known, They say "We know we are right and will stand or fall by the record"

Morrissey Sees Defeat and Prepares to Declare Bets off.

The Tribune prints the following Col Drake Dekay reports an interview with John Morrissey It was rumored that Morrissey would declare bets off with $1 500,000 in the pool box. Col. McKay asked him if he should consider a charge of Republican fraud in Florida and South Carolina as sufficient reason for declaring bets off Morrissey said it was a momentous question involving a million of dollars, he should consider the matter carefully and not decide at present, as his friends have bet large sums at great odds on Tilden It is thought Morrissey in case of a Republican victory will declare bets off.

At Johnson's pool rooms they declare they will pay bets according to the declared result.

At the Political Headquarters

NEW YORK Nov 10 Affairs are quiet at both the Republican and Democratic headquarters this morning, and the number of visitors is comparatively small. The members of the National Republican Committee expressed entire confidence that Hayes has been elected. Mr. King, Secretary of the National Democratic Committee said the despatches received to-day confirmed the claims of victory for Tilden.

J Barnwell Rhett, of South Carolina telegraphed to the Committee this morning that over and above a liberal estimate for Republican frauds, the Democratic electoral ticket and Wade Hampton were elected by 1,200 to 2,500 majority

Magone Comes Back

D Magone, Jr, Chairman of the N. Y Democratic State Committee, was at the Rooms this morning although a report was published that he passed through Washington yesterday on his way to Richmond. He states that he made a visit to Philadelphia of a purely private character and returned last evening. Mr King denied the report that Hewitt, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has left and said Hewitt would undoubtedly visit the Committee rooms to-day

A Charleston Democrat's Opinion.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 The following was received by the New York Associated Press Agent here from a private citizen (a Democrat) in Charleston, this morning:

This county gives the Republicans 6,214 majority. Nearly all the counties heard from, officially or unofficially, give Hampton, Dem., for Governor 1,213 majority. The Democratic Presidential ticket is not cut as much as was first supposed, and it is not believed that Tilden will fall more than 400 or 500 behind Hampton It does not appear possible for the Republicans to overcome the figures given for the counties not officially heard from.

The Herald and Post Claim Florida Republican.

3 50 P. M.—The Herald bulletin says 500 Republican majority in Florida.

The Post prints the following "Our special despatches from Florida leave no reasonable doubt that Hayes has a majority in that State. These despatches are confirmed by an examination of a despatch to the Times, giving the first returns by counties which have been received. The result in Louisiana is yet to be definitely ascertained, but it is reasonable to expect a Republican majority."

Of Louisiana.

"There has been no charge of intimidation in Louisiana this year. The Democrats complained of the method employed to secure a fair registration in New Orleans, but the latest reports, have brought no evidence that any legal voter has been kept from the polls. With no reason, therefore, to think that the negroes have in any considerable numbers been frightened from the polls, or that the election in New Orleans has been an unfair one, the probabilities indicate a Republican majority in the State. There have been no charges against the personal integrity of Packard, the Republican candidate for Governor, and he has doubtless strengthened the Republican ticket."

The Sun Concedes South Carolina Republican.

"It seems safe to strike South Carolina from the list of doubtful States. The Sun does so in its leading editorial this morning, and our special despatches received this afternoon confirm the reports of a Republican majority."

The Crowds Thinning Out.

NEW YORK 10—2.10 P. M. The crowds in front of the bulletin boards have not been as large as yesterday, the rain and wind deterring people from outside waiting.

A Democratic Special Indicates that Hayes Carries South Carolina

A Columbia (S. C.) despatch to the Telegram, Dem., says: "Many colored voters in this State voted a Hampton and Hayes ticket, especially in the Sea Island Districts. There the negroes are largely in the majority. While Hampton's election is claimed, it is probable that the electors for President are for Hayes."

Peace to be Preserved—No Tampering with Returns—A Sound Message from the President to Gen. Sherman.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10. The following are copies of telegrams sent about noon by the President.

To Gen. W. T. Sherman, Washington

Instruct Gen. Augur in Louisiana and Gen. Ruger in Florida to be vigilant with the force at their command to preserve the peace and good order, and to see that the proper and legal board of canvassers are unmolested in the performance of their duties. Should there be any grounds of suspicion of fraud on either side it should be reported and denounced at once No man worthy of the office of President should be willing to hold it if counted in or placed there by fraud. Either party can afford to be disappointed in the result; the country cannot afford to have the result tainted by the suspicion of illegal or false returns.

(Signed) U, S GRANT.

A Second Message.

To Gen. Sherman, Washington

Send all the troops to Gen. Augur he may deem necessary to ensure an entirely quiet and peaceable count of the ballots actually cast. They may be taken from South Carolina unless there is reason to suspect an outbreak there The presence of citizens from other States I understand is requested in Louisiana to see that the canvassers make a fair count of the votes actually cast It is to be hoped that representative and fair men of both parties will go

(Signed) U S GRANT

Troops Ordered to Florida.

WASHINGTON, Nov 10 Four companies of troops are ordered from South Carolina to Florida this morning Gen. Ruger accompanies them to Tallahassee.

Troops for Florida.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 13. U S. troops have been ordered from South Carolina to Florida Two companies stationed at Aiken leave this afternoon for Tallahassee

C., Nov. 10 [Special to Telegram.] Intelligence of what looks like a political assassination at Newlight, about 25 miles from Raleigh reached here Rufus Ferrill, a colored Democrat was missing on Monday On Wednesday his corpse was found hanging in the barn of Wm. Mangum, a white Republican of Newlight Two negroes are arrested on suspicion of complicity in the murder

What Mr. Baker says

Hon Thomas C Fuller, of this city, has just received a despatch from Hon James M. Baker, of Jacksonville, Florida, stating that Florida is Democratic by 1500 majority for the entire ticket.

A News Agency's Report.

3 45 P M —Kirnan's News Agency says Senator Conover, of Florida, telegraphs to Washington that the State has undoubtedly gone Democratic

AFTERNOON AND EVENING RETURNS.

ILLINOIS

Democratic Politicians Flocking to Louisiana.

CHICAGO, Nov 10. Gen John M Corse, a prominent Democrat and Chairman of the First Congressional Committee, left here last night for Louisiana

Gain of Six Republican Congressmen.

Besides the Republican Congressmen gained in Illinois, whose names have already been reported, Marsh is elected in the 10th district This makes a gain of 6 and reverses the Congressional delegation from Illinois. The Republicans here also claim the election of Ashcroft over Sparks in the 16th district.

NEW YORK.

The Assembly Republican

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. Additional returns from the interior of this State show that the Republicans have a majority in the Assembly.

OHIO.

Hayes' Majority 6,000

COLUMBUS, Nov. 10. General Wikoff, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, furnishes the following information The 69 counties of Ohio heard from up to noon to-day show a Republican loss of 162 on Barnes' majority at the October election The indications are that Hayes' majority will be about 6,000

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Confident of 8,000 Majority.

COLUMBIA, Nov 9—Night. The official count is received from only nine out of 32 counties in the State These nine counties with most accurate attainable estimates and reports from the remaining 23 counties give not less than 8 000 Republican majority in South Carolina Democratic majorities are based on their estimates of counties not officially returned, and they cannot be true except by great fraud resulting from causes which will defeat all such apparent results We do not fear a reduction below the above figure on the final and honest vote and count

D H CHAMBERLAIN

Sure for Hayes and Wheeler

COLUMBIA, Nov 9. Enough returns have been received from the various parts of the State to show that it is sure for Hayes and Wheeler and Chamberlain, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding A majority of several thousand for Hayes is certain.

R. B. ELLIOTT, Chairman Executive Committee

Great Democratic Frauds Evident.

NEW YORK, Nov 10. The Times' special correspondent at Columbia, S. C, telegraphs as follows: As the returns come in from the up country of South Carolina, it becomes evident great frauds were attempted by the Democrats, but they will not be able to overcome the majority for Hayes Gov. Chamberlain has just sent the following despatch to friends in the North.

Our exact majority can only be ascertained by an official count, but you can rely upon it that any returns reducing it below 8,000 are the result of frauds which will be defeated

D H CHAMBERLAIN.

Elliott, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, is confident Hayes' majority will be at least 8,000. Democrats all over the South are losing hope. Both parties are anxious and throng the telegraph offices for news.

The Hampton Organ's Slate.

CHARLESTON, Nov. 10.—10 p. m The News and Courier has just received official advices from the last of the counties hitherto reported unofficially making Hampton's majority for Governor 1,434.—Tilden's majority may fall 200 or 300 behind Hampton's, but is certainly over 1000

WASHINGTON TERRITORY

Republican Delegate Elected.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10. A Portland, Oregon, despatch says: Returns from Washington Territory indicate the election of Jacobs, Republican candidate for Delegate to Congress, by about 250 majority.

OREGON.

Our Victory Assured.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10. Full returns from 20 counties in Oregon show a Republican majority of 1,202. There are but 3 more counties to hear from, two of which will offset each other, and the third will give a Republican majority The accuracy of these returns can be relied on.

FLORIDA.

Republican on both State and National Tickets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10. The Post bulletins the following: The Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Florida telegraphs that the State has gone Republican both on the National and State tickets.

A Democratic Papers Claim.

A Western Union bulletin, dated Lake City, midnight, says: The Jacksonville Press (Dem) will issue a leader giving Florida a Democratic majority of 1888, prepared by experienced men and based on reliable returns and carefully computed estimates.

Hayes' Majority Placed at 5,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—10.45. A Herald bulletin just issued says Hayes has carried Florida by 5,000.

A Counter Claim by the Democrats.

The following is from the W. U. Telegraph manager at Lake City, dated 10.30 A. M.: The steamboat referred to yesterday reached Pilatka from St. John river at 4 o'clock last night with returns showing increased Democratic majorities. It is conceded by the best informed that the State will give a Democratic majority of at least 1,700 votes.

The Returns Coming Favorable for Hayes.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—10.15. Herald Bulletin: Returns from 23 counties give Florida to Hayes by nearly 6,000 majority. Republicans claim that Hayes will carry the State by over 1,200.

Specials to the N. Y. Times—The State Undoubtedly Republican.

JACKSONVILLE, Nov. 9.—N. Y. Times' special. Official returns from 19 counties report a Republican majority of 4,727. There are 20 counties to hear from which gave a Democratic majority in 1874 of 3151. allowing the Democrats their majority of 1874, and indications are it will not be increased, the Republicans elect their entire ticket by 1,576 majority. If the remaining 20 counties yet to be heard from show Republican gains in proportion to the counties given in the table above, Gov. Hayes' majority will be at least 2,200. Jefferson County gave in 1874 a Republican majority of 350, official returns from this county are not yet in, but the majority will be 100 better. The Republicans have certainly carried the State by a handsome majority and we hold the Fort Florida greets the Nation and conducts Hayes to the White House

PETER JONES.
Secretary Republican State Committee.

The Republican Gains too Great to be Overcome

TALLHASSEE, Nov. 9.—Later, N Y. Times special. Five of the most populous counties give 6,000 Republican majority, a large gain, which it is impossible for the Democratic counties to overcome. Many close counties show small Republican gains. The vote for the State and Electoral ticket is about even except in Duval County, where the Electoral ticket leads a little over 100 The State is certainly safe for Hayes and Stearns. Purman, Rep., is elected to Congress in the 1st District Returns from 23 counties give a Republican majority of 4,500; 13 counties yet to hear from.

M. MARTIN

The Western Union Telegraph Company bulletin the following 'Partial returns from Manatee county Florida, give a Democratic majority of 338, a Democratic gain of 166

LOUISIANA.

The State Republican

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 The following was received late last night

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 9—To Hon Z Chandler Latest returns from Tensas parish gives 3,800 Rep majority, Concordia gives 2,400 Rep. majority The Dem majority in this city is 9 600 Despatches from Lafayette parish indicate a falling off of nearly 1,000 in the Dem majority of that parish There are a number of distant parishes still to hear from, but most careful estimates leaves the State Republican even counting the votes of five bull-dogged parishes in which the election was a sham

(Signed) A J DUMONT
Chairman Rep Campaign Committee

The Returns Show Republican Gains—The White Leaguers Destroying Returns.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 9—Night Returns are still favorable. We have just received information that at Delta Madison parish, opposite Vicksburg, the White League broke into the court house and destroyed the ballot boxes and returns from several polls which the law requires to be deposited with the clerk Fortunately we had counted all except one poll and have the original returns. Hayes has 2,150 majority in that parish, a gain of over 500 over 1874 I have this moment received the vote of Tensas parish which gives Hayes 2,792 majority, a gain of more than 200

W. P. KELLOGG,
Governor of Louisiana

The Democracy Desperate at the Loss of the State.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 9—Night Hon Z Chandler Packard's majority in Madison parish is 2,200 After the official count had been made and returned, five boxes containing 1,400 votes were seized and destroyed Watterson and Beck left Louisville to-night for New Orleans The Democratic leaders here are desperate at the certain loss of the State by not less than 8,000 votes.

J R. G. PITKIN,
U S Marshal

The Democrats Admit Themselves Beaten.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10 Times' Special—Packard comes to this city with 16-000 majority, being 8 000 in excess of the Democratic majority in the city. The heavy Republican parishes are now coming in, and the leading Democrats admit that they are beaten, despite their violence in Ouachita, Morehouse, Richland and E Feliciana

A J DUMONT,
Chairman Repub State Com

The Democracy Resorting to Desperate Means to Overcome Defeat

The Democratic papers publish returns claiming the State and giving votes alleging to be cast in parishes from which it is, humanly speaking, impossible that any communication can have been received, as they are far removed from railroad, river or telegraph From every parish from which authoritative returns have been received up to 11 p m, the results are most satisfactory Our majorities are larger than we expected, and the Democratic majorities smaller.

Had the five parishes of Ouachita, Morehouse, East Feliciana, West Feliciana and East Baton Rouge been permitted to cast their usual vote, which even in 1874, on the heels of the White League riots, gave us 3707 majority, Hayes and Packard would have carried the State by 15,000 majority As it is our majority will be 8,000 smaller

Our fear is that the Democrats will set to work to destroy the evidence of the election before the votes can be officially tabulated. They have already commenced this by destroying five boxes in Madison parish, which gave Hayes and Packard 2 150 majority. Fortunately in this case the record of the votes cast has been preserved.

An accurate statement of the results throughout the State cannot possibly be arrived at before Saturday, but the desperate measures which the opposition are already resorting to show that they know we have carried the State.

A J DUMONT,
Chairman Rep. Committee.

A W Paine, and remarks on the life and character of his life-long friend and associate, will be made by Judge Kent, and perhaps by other members of the Bar which will be responded to by the Court. The proceedings will undoubtedly be interesting to the many friends of our late venerable and respected fellow-citizen, and the court-room will be crowded.

WOULDN'T CROW FOR TILDEN. When the first returns was received indicating Tilden's election, a number of the Democrats of Milo met to congratulate each other upon the result and drank each other's health to a late hour—or perhaps we would better say an early hour—the next morning. As one of them approached his own premises he listened in vain for the crowing of the roosters, but not a sound escaped from them. "Blast you!" exclaimed he in great indignation, "If you won't crow over such news as this I'll cut your heads off," and suiting the action to the word he entered the hen-coop and cut off the heads of every one of the non-crowing roosters. If he finds he has lost his chickens and his candidate too what will he say?

AWAITING THE VERDICT. The intense political excitement which has agitated our people during the week has made business a secondary and news-gathering the primary object of all. The bulletin boards on Ingraham's corner, as often as renewed, drew crowds of people, and THE WHIG AND COURIER office has been daily crowded full, and from noon till late this evening, while a still larger crowd was gathered outside, scanning the despatches shown in the windows. Everyone wanted to know "What is the latest?" and frequent remarks like these: "Looks Hazey," "We've got 'em'" and "Tilden's elected," indicated the political status and confidence of the speakers. The closeness of the contest has kept everyone on the qui vive, even the ladies and children on the street entering spiritedly into the discussion of the chances of the candidates. Never before was there a more intense or prolonged excitement than the election of Tuesday has produced. The returns as they came in during the afternoon and evening gave the Republicans greater confidence and the Democrats less, and the latter early sought their homes last evening, not getting comfort enough to keep them from their respective firesides. The effect of the excitement on business is better expressed by the remark made yesterday by one of our business men: "I don't care who wants goods to-day, but do want to know who is elected, as that will affect my business more than a few days' neglect."

Obituary.

AARON BABB, ESQ.

On Thursday morning Aaron Babb, Esq., one of our prominent lumber operators and dealers, passed from the scenes of earth after long and painful suffering from a dropsical affection Mr. Babb first complained of his health last June, he being then up river superintending the driving of logs on the West Branch, saying that he was pressed for breath when walking, and thought he had phthisic He was engaged there about forty days and on his return he visited the mills at Bradley regularly until August, since which time he has been in the hands of a physician, and has ridden out occasionally, the last time being one week ago last Wednesday.

Mr. Babb, we believe, was born in Saccarappa, and came to this city where he engaged in lumbering. In 1842 he and a brother were in the business together, and from that time to 1852 or thereabouts, he was interested in the firm of Strickland, Winslow & Co, and with S P & H Strickland

In 1852 he went into partnership with Lysander Strickland, Esq, and continued with him under the firm name of Babb & Strickland up to the present time The first winter they were engaged in logging in Canada, and with the exception of the winter of 1861, they have continued to cut timber, and began to manufacture lumber in 1854 which they have also continued, being interested in the mills of the Great Works Milling and Manufacturing Company at Bradley

Mr Babb was emphatically a self-made man, being left to depend on his own resources at an early age and having very few opportunities for gaining an education, but he was nevertheless a man of broad views thoroughly understanding his business in not only its larger transactions but also its minute details. As a lumber operator he was thoroughly practical, and his sound judgment was hardly ever at fault in any department of a large business embracing the cutting and driving of logs and the manufacture and sale of lumber Active in the forwarding of business operations, he gave an impetus to all about him that kept work moving briskly and successfully

During the years he has been a citizen of Bangor, he has ever been a prominent active and thorough going business man, esteemed by all for his kindly qualities and his unswerving honesty in all transactions in which he was engaged

Mr Babb was sixty-three years of age, and leaves two sons, Andrew and Charles, both engaged in business in Boston, the former being until a recent date of the firm of Babb & Lancaster of this city, a daughter, wife of S Adams, of this city and a wife and two young boys aged respectively 5 and 1 years In his death Bangor loses one of her honored business men and the family a kind husband, and a devoted father The funeral occurs at two o clock this afternoon

LAME BACK AND RHEUMATISM CURED BY COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTERS.
Messrs Weeks & Potter Gentlemen,—One year ago I was seized with a severe attack of Rheumatism in my right hip to which I was subject. I tried the various liniments and rheumatic cures but without the least benefit, when my son a druggist, suggested one of your COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTERS The effect was almost magical for to my grateful surprise, I was almost immediately well again and was able to work upon my farm as usual whereas, before the application of the Plaster, I could do nothing and every step gave me pain A few weeks since, one year from the first attack, the disease returned but I am happy to say the second Plaster proved as efficacious as the first, and I am now well My wife wishes me to add that one Plaster has cured her of a very lame back We think there is nothing in the world of remedies that can compare with the COLLINS' VOLTAIC PLASTERS for Rheumatism and Lame Back, and cheerfully recommend them to the suffering Yours very respectfully ROBERT COTTON

GRANDMOTHER GRAY.

BY MARY KELLY BOUTELLE.

Propped in her old arm chair,
Sunset gilding her thin white hair
Silently knitting sits Grandmother Gray,
While I on my elbows beside her lean,
And tell what wonderful things I mean
To have and to do if I can, some day
You can talk so to Grandmother Gray—
She doesn't laugh, nor send you away.

I see, as I look from the window-seat,
A house there yonder, across the street,
With a fine French roof, and a frescoed hall
The deep bay windows are full of flowers
They've a clock of bronze that chimes the hours
A fountain—I hear it tinkle and fall
When the doors are open "I mean," I say
To live in a house like that, some day
Money will buy it, says Grandmother Gray

There's a low barouche all green and gold
And a pair of horses as black as jet,
I've seen drive by—and before I'm old
A turn out like that I hope to get
How they prance and shine in their harness gay!
What fun it would be if they ran away!
Money will buy them," says Grandmother Gray

To-morrow I know, a great ship sails
Out of port and across the sea
Oh to feel in my face the ocean gales
And the salt waves dancing under me!
In the old far lands of legion and lay
I long to roam—and I shall some day
Money will do it, says Grandmother Gray

"And when, like me you are old," says she
"And getting and going are done with, dear
What then do you think will the one thing be
You will wish and need to content you here?"
Oh when in my chair I live [illegible] stay
Love you see will content me, dear
That money won't buy, says Grandmother Gray

And is it not enough, if there's nothing worth
All your care when the years are past,
But love, heaven and love on earth
Why not begin where you'll end at last?
Begin to-day up treasure to-day
Treasure that nothing can take away
Bless the Lord! says Grandmother Gray

ONLY A LETTER.

Margaret Oakley was not strictly beautiful—her features were not classically regular nor was her figure perfect. But she had soft brown eyes, sensitive, smiling lips and possessed an indescribable charm of voice and manner which rendered her very attractive and lovable.

So thought Philip Linton as he walked beside her on the lovely June evening. He pretended to be engrossed by the beautiful scenery about them, but all the time within him he was wondering how long he had loved Margaret. He could not remember. They had been neighbors and companions from childhood. He had ever acted to her as a kind elder brother, and until lately had not dreamed of a closer relation. Perhaps this state of affairs might have continued much longer unaltered if Philip had stayed on in their quiet town, but he had obtained an appointment in a London house, and the prospect of a separation startled him into the consciousness that he entertained for Margaret a feeling deeper than brotherly affection, and he resolved she should know the state of his heart ere he went away.

During the quiet evening ramble Philip told his tale of love. Margaret listened with quivering lips and tear dimmed eyes. Philip had lately become very dear to her, and although his avowal somewhat startled her, the words of tenderness found a ready response in her own heart. When he stopped, taking her hands, asked if she would try to love him above all others, she raised her thoughtful eyes to his face and said simply "I do so already Philip."

So their engagement was a settled thing. No objection was made by Margaret's uncle and aunt who were also her adopted parents. They liked Philip and knew him to be steady and energetic, and likely to make his way in the world. The only stipulation was that their marriage should be deferred for two years, on account of Margaret's youth, and that Philip might have time to prepare a comfortable home. Two years seemed a long time to Philip and he demurred a great deal, but the decision was unalterable, so he had to submit. Margaret told him she was glad of the arrangement, as it would give him an opportunity to prove his own heart.

"Do you doubt my constancy then?" he said in a tone of tender reproach.

"No," was the frank reply, "perfect love cannot admit a misgiving. But you are but mortal, Phil. In the city where you are going you will enter into new society, and it is quite possible you may meet with those who are fairer and richer than I. This is what I wish you to understand: I should [illegible] be the case—should you ever feel the slightest desire to change or experience a regret for the words you have spoken to me—remember in that moment you are as free as though you and I had never met."

Philip put his arm round her and looked steadily into her eyes as he said with grave earnestness—

"Never again let me hear such words [illegible] I would have my wife to be [illegible] I have known and loved you long [illegible] and the wealth of the whole world would not [illegible] sweet Margaret."

"And so it shall be forever, shall it not [illegible]" [illegible] the fervent reply. And Margaret's heart was at rest.

The weeks and months passed joyously to Margaret. Certainly she greatly missed Philip's companionship, but then she had his letters [illegible] visit to anticipate. She was not [illegible] cheerful and light hearted [illegible] of enjoyment [illegible] and this new joy gave a colour to [illegible] her life [illegible]

Philip was very successful in his new life. His circumstances improved beyond his most sanguine expectations. He spoke hopefully of the future and in his letters to Margaret he pictured in glowing words the home he was preparing for her. And Margaret's thoughts lingered lovingly on the vision, and her faithful heart often sent up the petition that she might prove worthy of such affection. She often wished [illegible] rich that she might have some [illegible] to give Philip beyond the dowry of her love, but whenever such thought was put into words he assured her that a good wife was beyond all price and far better than her own weight in gold.

Old Mr Randall—Margaret's uncle—always attended the weekly market at a neighboring town, and it was an invariable custom for Margaret to walk to the little station to meet him on his return. The old gentleman was very methodical in all his habits. As long as Margaret could remember he had gone away every Thursday morning by the ten o'clock train returning punctually at half past four. Consequently it caused no small surprise when one afternoon her uncle opened the garden gate exactly as the hall-clock was striking two. His wife and niece both hurried to the door anxious to learn the cause of his unexpected appearance. They were quickly satisfied that nothing was wrong, but from a certain comical twitching about the corners of his mouth, and the merry twinkle of his eyes, it was evident something unusual had occurred.

"Now, uncle," said Margaret in a coaxing way, "do tell us what news you have brought. I can read in your face that it is something pleasant."

"Well, yes. I have some good news, and moreover it is something that concerns yourself, little woman. Guess what it is," he said, pinching her ears.

"Is Philip coming down?" she asked with eager breath.

"Bless the girl!" replied the old gentleman, "she can think of nothing good apart from her lover! No, it is nothing concerning Philip so try again."

"I never guessed a riddle in my life, uncle, so be generous and tell me."

"Tell her John," supported Mrs Randall.

"Well, then here's news for you. Miss Dorothy Blake is dead, and has left to her god-daughter, Margaret Oakley, the sum of ten thousand pounds."

"To me uncle? Is it possible?" "Are you sure this is true?"

"Quite true," said the old gentleman, enjoying her astonishment. "The first person I met at Ruston Market to-day was lawyer Curtis who told me the news. He will be here to-morrow to make the communication to you in full legal form. So now you are no longer our poor little orphan niece, but a rich heiress. The next thing I suppose will be your giving the cold shoulder to your poor old uncle and aunt. And Philip—what's to become of him? Of course a young lady with ten thousand pounds cannot bestow herself upon a mere town traveler, with a limited income."

"Oh, uncle, how can you talk so?" cried Margaret, lifting her quivering face from his shoulder. "If the sum were millions instead of thousands, it would not change my heart to you and dear auntie; and the wealth of the whole world is not to be compared with Philip's love."

The pleasant excitement continued throughout the evening. Questions were repeated, and plans discussed [illegible] predominant [illegible] now [illegible] upon Philip. She wished to present her uncle and aunt each with a thousand pounds, but this the old gentleman stoutly refused to allow. They had enough, he said, to enable them to jog on quietly and comfortably as heretofore, and, if they should live to spend all their little savings, why, then they would come to Margaret for a home. He strongly urged Margaret to have her money settled upon herself before her marriage, but she would not entertain the idea. It would have seemed to her like a want of confidence in Philip, and to Margaret's mind perfect love and trust were inseparable.

When Margaret awoke the next morning it all seemed like a dream. She could not realize the change a single day had made in her position. But, when twelve o'clock brought lawyer Curtis with his formal explanations and legal papers, the illusion was at once dispelled, and she entered into the necessary business negotiations with a self possession and quick perception that equally astonished her grave visitor and delighted her uncle. Then suddenly a most romantic idea occurred to her, she would tell Philip nothing of the change in her fortune until after their marriage. He should marry as he had wooed her, believing her to be possessed of nothing but the rich dowry of her patient love for him. Then, after she had taken his name, she would place in his hands her whole fortune without restriction or reserve. Over and over again Margaret rehearsed in her mind the speech of presentation, and pictured to herself the genuine astonishment of Philip, and the increased happiness they would enjoy together. The old people were easily influenced to keep the secret, so Margaret indulged in glowing anticipations to her heart's content and built many glorious air-castles, little dreaming of the storm that would overtake her ere she reached the desired haven.

The June roses were in full beauty when Philip left business to spend a few days in the country with Margaret. They were to be married in October, and this was probably the last stay he would make ere he came to fetch his wife. Margaret found it very hard to keep her secret, but she bravely persevered in her plan, and Philip Linton little guessed that the careful savings of his life did not equal one year's income of the little woman by his side. And Margaret richly enjoyed the prospect of frustrating many of his little plans made with careful regard to economy.

"Would you like to spend a week by the seaside when we are married little one?" asked Philip as they strolled through the home meadow.

Margaret's heart gave a quick bound. It was what she had secretly planned of late but she only said quietly though with much inward amusement "We must not think of what we should like, Phil, but of what is practicable. You could not afford a stay at the seaside, so we will not discuss it."

"But indeed I mean to afford it, dear Maggie," he said, "and lest you should be troubling your wise little head as to ways and means I'll let you into a secret. Know then most careful little woman, that for the past three months I have spent two hours each evening in law copying and the fruits of this work shall be devoted to pleasure. I have worked for this express purpose. I remembered your passionate love of the sea, and determined that our first days of wedded life should be spent where you would best enjoy them. It is lovely at Brighton in the autumn. So all you have to do is to prepare suitable dresses which the sea air cannot spoil. I'll take care of the rest."

"And you've been working so hard just to give me pleasure," she said in a tone of mingled tenderness and reproach.

"I could not have had a better incentive," was the quick reply, "and I assure you my efforts have not been entirely free from selfish motives. You belong to me you know, little Margaret, and a man naturally cares for what is his own. If my means were but equal to my wish to give you pleasure instead of a week it should be a month by the sea."

"Poor folk must not think of such things," said Margaret smiling.

"Maggie have you ever wished for riches?"

"Yes, Phil. I have sometimes wished I had a large fortune in my own right,—not for the sake of riches nor yet for the means of taking more pleasure than we now enjoy, but only that I might have something to give you."

"You could give me nothing better than yourself, dearest," he returned, "and if you make me happy I am entirely content with our position."

They continued their walk in silence for some time. Margaret deeply appreciated this fresh proof of her lover's thoughtful affection. She was yet more thankful for the tie she had in store for him, feeling how entirely worthy he was of her perfect love and trust. It was hard to keep the secret just then.

"You have not yet told me how you like the plan," said Philip at length.

"Nothing could have pleased me better," was the smiling reply. "The only regret is that you should have been at work late at night when you ought to have been resting after your day's toil."

"Do not fear that I am working myself to death," he said, and stepping before her Philip bade her examine him well and assure herself there were no signs of illness or delicacy about him.

Maggie looked admiringly at the strong erect manly figure—the very personification of vigorous health and resolution.

"What is your conclusion?" he asked with comical gravity.

"That you are a man of very noble presence indeed," she replied in the same tone and profound obeisance. And then taking his arm again she said seriously as if following some train of thought which his words had interrupted: "What a difference there is between you and your cousin, William Ashburne—poor Will, so diminutive, weak and deformed! Do you know Phil I have often wondered how Sarah could have married him?"

"It was quite a love-match," Philip explained, "and poor Will in spite of his great physical affliction is a most worthy fellow."

"He is indeed a good and noble man," Margaret agreed. "He is certainly very richly endowed with every mental and moral excellence. But I have an idea that a man should be physically, as well as mentally the stronger. Don't you remember, Phil, the time that Sarah slipped in the orchard and sprained her ankle? How utterly powerless poor Will was to help her! And how wistful he looked as you so easily lifted and carried her into the house! I think that a woman should feel able to rely upon her husband's strength and protection in every way."

"Then you mean to say, little woman, that, if I were a pale, delicate-looking man like poor Will, instead of the strong giant that I am you could not love me, or that, if I were deformed and lame as he, or even walked with a limp you would not have me for your husband?" And Philip saucily took Margaret's face between his hands and looked into her clear, truthful eyes.

"No," she softly said, "I feel that I should shrink from marrying any one deformed or lame—any one less strong and erect than you are at this moment, dear Phil."

In after days how vividly those words were remembered, causing many hours of anxiety and sadness!

"This is our last 'Good-bye' I trust," said Philip, as they parted in the station on the day he returned to London. "Only four months, my dear one and I shall come to take you to be with me forever."

* * * * *

A week had passed since Philip's departure but no letter had reached Margaret. This was a matter of much surprise. Philip invariably wrote twice a week and almost his last words were, "I will write as usual on Thursday, dearest." So, as day after day passed, bringing only disappointment Margaret grew anxious and felt sure something was wrong. At last, one morning, instead of passing the house as he had done for many days, the old postman opened the garden-gate and came up the path, but Margaret quickly saw the writing was in a strange hand. Wonderingly and with an undefined dread of evil, she opened the letter, which was addressed to herself, and read—

"DEAR MADAM,—I deeply regret to have bad news to communicate. Mr Philip Linton the town traveler to our firm, has met with a serious accident. On Wednesday last a bird belonging to my little daughter escaped from its cage and took refuge in a window at the top of a spiral staircase. Mr Linton, who was in the office at the time, at once volunteered to rescue the child's favorite. Standing upon the polished railing to reach the bird he lost his balance, and fell from the dangerous height to the bottom of the house. Medical aid was at once procured, but seeing the injury was so serious, the doctor had him conveyed to the hospital, where he now lies in an unconscious and very dangerous state. We sent to his lodgings, but the landlady could give us no information concerning his friends. By the merest chance, on opening his order-book a few moments since, I found an envelop addressed to yourself. Painful as the task is, I feel it my duty to tell you the truth, without reserve, that you may be prepared for the worst. I grieve to say the doctors give but faint hope of recovery.

"Be assured Mr. Linton has had every possible care, and is under the most skilful physicians. Accept my deepest sympathy, and, in any possible way I can serve you, believe me yours to command,

CHARLES ATKINSON."

With an agony of feeling she would never forget, Margaret read the words. She did not scream or faint, but she looked like one suddenly turned into stone. With a steadfast resolution that only a great shock can give, she went to her uncle and communicated her sad news.

"Philip has met with an accident," she said, "and is dangerously ill. I am going at once to see him." And then, ere the astonished, grief stricken old people could ask a single question, she put the letter in to her uncle's hand, and ran up stairs to make rapid preparations for her journey.

Margaret was a country bred girl—in all her life she had but twice visited the great city—so that under ordinary circumstances the journey alone would have seemed a formidable undertaking. But now fear and timidity were forgotten in the intense desire to be with the sufferer at the earliest possible moment. Fortunately a train was due within half an hour, so ten minutes after she had left the room, Margaret, with a white but most determined face again stood in the parlor dressed for her journey.

"My dear child, you cannot possibly go alone," began Mr Randall.

"I can, and I must," asserted Margaret firmly. "Philip is ill—dying perhaps, and my place is to stand beside him. Don't say another word if you love me dear uncle, but please, give me all the money you have in the house and let me go. No, uncle, don't come to the station for I shall have to hurry for the train." And taking the little bag of silver from his hand she hastily kissed them both and hurried away.

Poor Margaret! what a change had come to her! But a few days since her future looked so bright and joyous, life had appeared to her like one pleasant holiday. She had walked with Philip in the June sunshine, among the birds and flowers, with her heart filled with love and gladness, and had wondered how any one could be gloomy and sorrowful in this beautiful world, with so many blessings around them. Now alas she was one of earth's saddest. It was the first real trouble she had known and the blow had fallen where she could least bear it.

On reaching London Margaret took a cab and proceeded to the house of Mr Atkinson the gentleman who had sent her the news. He and his wife received her most kindly, and during her stay in the metropolis proved to be invaluable friends. From them Margaret learnt the particulars of Philip's state. His leg was broken and the hip-joint severely injured, but worse than all, in his descent he had struck his head on the balustrade—and it was this that made the doctor apprehensive for his life. Since the accident he had been in a perfectly unconscious state, not even giving any sign of feeling when his leg was being skilfully set.

"Then there is no hope?" asked Margaret piteously.

"While there is life we will hope," said the merchant taking her hand. "You know the worst now, my dear child, but do not despair. Heaven is merciful, and will let us hope restore our friend."

Poor Margaret's tears could no longer be kept back, she wept as though her heart would break.

"It will do her good, poor child," said Mrs Atkinson, "tears are the best relief to an over-charged heart."

On account of his very precarious state Philip had been placed in a private room, and besides the hospital attendants Mr Atkinson paid for the services of a trained nurse. He easily gained permission for Margaret to stay with the patient, but he would not allow her to go until she had taken some necessary rest and refreshment. It was well that he did so as it helped to prepare her for the part she had to sustain. She was perfectly calm when, towards evening she was conducted into the presence of the sufferer and only by one little shiver did she evince any sign of feeling. So Margaret looked once more upon the face of the one dearest to her.

Alas what a change! It was scarcely a week since Philip had stood beside her, strong and handsome with the flush of perfect health upon his face, in all the pride and vigor of noble manliness. Now he lay on a hospital bed, helpless and shattered, with a broken limb and bandaged head, and a face so ghastly white that he might have been taken for one already dead. And yet as Margaret softly kissed him there seemed to come to her a whisper of hope.

The death like stupor was succeeded by fever and delirium. And then after many days of painful watching the crisis came. It was just as day was breaking that the physician and nurse and Margaret stood anxiously waiting for a change, favorable or unfavorable that a few moments would bring. The low moaning had ceased and the patient lay white and motionless as if death had already claimed him. Suddenly there was a slight contraction of the brow, a deep sigh and then Philip's eyes opened and looked consciously upon Margaret.

"Maggie my dearest have I been asleep or dreaming, or what?"

With wonderful presence of mind she softly kissed him and said in calm tones, "You have been ill dear Philip, and you must not talk until you have taken this medicine," and she put to his lips the glass that the skilful physician had placed within her reach.

"Tell me what is the matter," he requested when he had taken the draught.

"You must not talk until you have rested dear Philip," was the reply. "Try to sleep now and when you awake I will tell you all." Softly passing her hand over his face, Margaret continued the gentle, caressing touch until the medicine had taken the desired effect, and Philip's regular breathing gave evidence of quiet, healthful sleep.

Then the doctor touched Margaret's arm. She gave one quick glance into his face, and softly followed him from the room.

"He is saved," said the physician in reply to her eager look.

A fervent expression of thanksgiving came from Margaret's lips.

"You are a brave little woman," he continued, "and have performed your part perfectly. Ah, there is no skill greater than love can supply."

"Will he really get well and strong, doctor?" asked Margaret, looking up through her tears.

"He will live, my child, and, with care, may regain health and tolerable strength, but he will be lame for life."

She scarcely heeded the last part of the sentence. Her heart welcomed the one joyful fact that Philip would live. The life she had so earnestly prayed for would be spared. She felt overwhelmed with gratitude and joy, and, though her tears flowed fast, every one of them was illumined with heart sunshine.

As soon as Philip could be removed, he was taken to his native village, where the country air and the tender care of old Mrs Randall and Margaret, greatly helped towards his rapid recovery.

* * * * *

September was come. Nearly three months had passed since Philip's accident, but, though his general health was re-established, there was a perceptible difference in him since he had walked with Margaret in the June sunshine. The rich color of full health he could no longer claim, but on the pale, intellectual face there rested a new expression that told of a heart refined and ennobled by the discipline of suffering.

His confirmed lameness of course prevented Philip's resuming his former employment. He was offered a clerkship in the same firm, but, yielding to his own wishes and the advice of his friends, he determined to stay in the country and establish a school, the occupation would be congenial to him, and he was well qualified for it. Already several pupils had been promised him, and Mr Atkinson had undertaken to interest some London friends in his behalf. Margaret warmly entered into the school plan, she knew Philip would be thoroughly at home in the work, and to live in the country would be so much better for his health. She had not yet told him of her fortune, although several times the temptation to do so had been very strong, when Philip seemed somewhat anxious as to the future. But having guarded her secret so far, Margaret kept to her purpose, and gloried in the anticipation of her "gift" to her husband. Still there was one little shadow.

During the past few weeks Margaret had noticed a change in Philip which sorely perplexed her. She did not for a moment think he loved her less, but she felt he was keeping back some thought or trying to bear alone some anxiety. Another thing she could not understand was that, although it was scarcely a month to the time that had been previously arranged for the marriage, for many days Philip had never mentioned the subject, and, when any playful allusion had been made to it by their friends, Margaret noticed that he was silent and looked at her sadly. She wondered if he had reason for wishing the time deferred, but she hesitated to mention the matter until he took the initiative, so she waited, sadly wondering, until an unexpected circumstance made all clear.

Philip's deformed cousin and his wife came to spend a day with them. William Ashburne was a scholar and a poet. His wonderful brain-power and rich mental gifts had long made his name famous in the world. A most successful literary career had not unfitted him for private life. He was an affectionate husband, and an open-hearted, firm friend. His genial, mirth loving spirit made all who knew him desirous of his companionship. Listening to the rich music of his voice and to the strong, noble thoughts he uttered they forgot the poor deformed body in involuntary homage to the glorious soul.

No wonder that with such a companion the day had been most enjoyable to all. It was specially to Philip. He and Will had been fast friends from childhood. There was a strong bond of sympathy between them, also great similarity of taste and feeling. Often in their boyhood had the strong arm of Philip supported the weak frame of his deformed cousin, while he was indebted to Will for much of his mental culture. Of late years the distance between them had allowed their meeting but seldom, so this visit was one of rare pleasure to both. Margaret heartily participated in their enjoyment, and noticed with delight that the cloud which had lately hung over Philip seemed entirely banished.

In the evening Philip and Margaret went with their visitors to the station and as they walked home their conversation turned upon William Ashburne, his goodness and his rare gifts. Philip told Margaret of his early history.

"I am glad you appreciate him," he said, "for next to yourself he is my dearest friend."

"No one could help liking poor Will," Margaret observed, "and just now I have a special regard for him, for the good he has done you to-day."

He looked at her inquiringly. There was a moment's hesitation, and then Margaret said in her clear, soft voice—

"I am not given to fancies dear Phil but lately I have felt there is some change in you. I have tried to define it, but I can not. I only know that you are graver and sadder, and that some little shadow of reserve has come between your heart and mine. To-day, since Will has been with us you have seemed like yourself again."

He looked at her sadly but did not reply. Margaret continued—

"I think I can read in your face the existence of some sorrow. Tell me what it is, dear Phil, that I may either try to remove it, or at least help you to bear it."

He took both her hands in his own and looking steadily at her, said—

"Margaret, my dearest, my only trouble lies in the solution of this question— shall I offer to release you from your engagement to me?"

She looked at him wonderingly.

"It is not that I love you less," he continued, "for surely each day you seem dearer to me. But, in earnest thought of this matter lately, I have tried to put aside all selfish feeling, and to study only your happiness and welfare."

"I do not understand you," she said, "speak plainly, Phil."

"Sit down on the old tree, Maggie, and I will tell you all that is in my mind. Do you remember that evening in June when you and I sat here, and laid out our plans for the future?"

"Yes, Phil. It was the evening before you returned to London—just three days before your accident."

"Ah!" he said with a sigh, "what a change has come since then! As I stood here in my proud strength, you contrasted me with poor Will. We pitied him in his weakness and deformity, now, alas, the pity is more due to me!"

"My dear Phil how can you talk so. Your back is not deformed, and you do not walk a bit like poor Will. All that now remains of your accident is a slight limp which may yet disappear."

He scarcely seemed to heed her words but continued—

"I want you to recall all our conversation on that evening. Don't you remember you said you wondered that Sarah could have married Will? And you also said—these were your exact words, Maggie—I should shrink from marrying any one deformed or lame—any one less strong or erect than you are at this moment dear Phil."

In an instant the truth flashed upon Margaret. She saw the conclusion Philip had drawn from her careless words, and the cause of the change in his manner, which had so perplexed her lately, was now perfectly plain. A flush of pain came into her face, and the tears stood in her eyes. Philip still held her hands fast, earnestly regarding her.

"Maggie my dearest, those words have haunted me lately day and night, until I have felt like a thief in your presence. I am no longer a strong erect man. I have fallen so miserably below your standard that I have no right to keep you to your promise."

Margaret raised her eyes, and steadily met his searching look.

"Philip, if you leave me, my heart will be broken." And with a great sob she laid her head upon his shoulder.

He clasped her in his arms, and the silence that followed was more eloquent than any words. Philip was the first to speak.

"My dear little Margaret," he said, "are you sure that you know your own heart in this matter, and that you are not mistaking for another feeling what may be only pity?"

"I did not think you were so exacting, Philip," she replied. "I have just made a confession that surely ought to satisfy you, and still you doubt."

"No, love, it is not doubt, but craving for more such words."

"Philip dear, you must forget that careless remark of mine. Remember that you stood before me when I pictured my ideal. After all," she continued, "how imperfectly you men understand us women! Let me tell you, Phil, that, when a true woman really loves, she glorifies the object of her love, whatever it may be. He becomes her ideal, the one standard of excellence by which she measures all others."

Philip's reply was not in words. As they continued their walk homewards, each felt that the shadow that had rested on them lately had gone forever. In happy confidence they talked over their plans for the future, and made the final arrangements for their marriage. Philip expressed a hope that the seaside dresses would be ready by the 17th.

"It is not the first time you have mentioned that, Phil," she said. "Pray, how many dresses do you consider necessary for one week at Brighton?"

"I wish it could be for a month," he returned. "But, Maggie, I really think with the promise of so many pupils, we may reasonably extend our stay for a few days. What say you little woman?"

"That you must remember you are but a poor schoolmaster," she said, "and that I must not encourage any plan beyond our means." And Philip wondered much at the amused expression that accompanied the words.

* * * * *

In bright October sunshine, Philip and Margaret stood in the village church, and repeated the holy words that bound them together for all time. Margaret's uncle and aunt, and William Ashburne and his wife formed the entire company. Margaret, in her simple dress of white muslin, with ornaments of natural flowers, made as fair a picture in her husband's eyes as though she had been robed in gleaming satin and flashing jewels.

"Margaret, there's a pleasant breeze, and the tide is coming in grandly. Shall we go down to the beach? We must make the most of this last day by the sea."

"I'll get ready directly. But, Phil, do you forget this is your birthday?"

"Ah, so it is," he said. "Well, as I am a married man, I am not to get the usual present this year?"

"Indeed you will though," was the reply. "Phil, dear," she said, going to the window where he stood, "I have a gift that will surprise you. I had intended to give it to you at our wedding; but, as your birthday was so near, I have reserved it until now."

"What is it?" he asked, drawing her to him. "Let me see—last year you gave me slippers, and the year before that this watchguard. What have your skillful fingers been doing for me now?"

"Not much—only a little writing," she said, hiding her smiling face upon his shoulder. And then putting her lips close to his ear, she whispered, "Don't be disappointed, dear Philip. This is all I have to give you." And she placed in his hands a letter she had taken from her pocket.

"Only a letter!" he cried, holding it up. "Is this all you consider your husband worthy of, you mean little woman?"

"It is all I have to give," she answered. "Now read your letter while I get ready for our walk."

Sitting by the open window, in view of the glorious sea, he opened the letter, which was in Margaret's well-known writing, and read—

"You remember, dear Philip, the many eccentricities of my godmother, Miss Dorothy Blake? You once said that nothing she did would ever surprise you, but I think you will be surprised to hear that she has bequeathed to me the sum of ten thousand pounds. It was a characteristic oddity that she never gave me the slightest idea of this—indeed until her death no one imagined she was worth a tithe of that sum.

"I have known this since April last and kept the news for a pleasant surprise at our wedding. Philip, dearest one, this fortune is now yours. Mr Curtis has all the documents. I would not permit any settlement upon myself, but I give it all to you, without reserve or restriction. You cannot dream of the happiness it gives me to place this in your hands, my Phil."

Philip read the letter again and again to make sure he was not dreaming. He was so completely bewildered by surprise that he did not know Margaret had come back and was standing near him until she said, softly—

"Can you forgive me, Phil, for keeping a secret from you so long?"

"I know not what to say to you my darling," he replied. "It's most unexpected news and your exceeding goodness fill my heart with gratitude that is unspeakable."

"Let us thank Heaven for all its goodness," she said reverently as Philip rested his head upon her shoulder and closed his eyes.

When Margaret at length slyly whispered the suggestion that perhaps now they could afford to stay a few days longer by the sea it met with instant approval—indeed, their visit was prolonged from days to weeks. They were weeks of such perfect happiness that their memory lingered while life lasted.

The school plan was not wholly abandoned for although Philip was no longer compelled to work for a living, he felt that talents and opportunities should be employed for the good of others. A limited number of boarders enjoyed the advantage of a sound education and a happy home beneath the Lintons' roof, and many a promising youth of humble origin, who but for them might have plodded on in an inferior sphere owed his education and progress in life to their generosity and careful training.

Each October Philip and Margaret pay a visit to Brighton, when they talk over past and present happiness, especially recalling the day when Margaret's present to her husband was "ONLY A LETTER."
